

New 8-week Mentoring Program Helps Single Men Unlock the Secrets to Meeting and Dating Women Online

Dating guru, author and speaker Dennis Miedema announces the launch of his 8-week mentoring program for men, Win With Women. Men will finally learn how to master online dating with both social networks and online dating sites.

The Netherlands, March 3, 2009 - While most single men are comfortable offline meeting women in a bar, they are less comfortable online using social networks. This is unfortunate. If used properly, social networks will duplicate a man's effort by up to 20 times in his pursuit of meeting special someone.

It took five years of unsuccessfully slaving away in the trenches of online dating for Win With Women founder, Dennis Miedema, to realize what was wrong with his own approach. He never would have learned this without the help of his younger sister and her inbox, which at the time was bombarded with potential suitors.

After reading the subject lines in his sister's inbox, Dennis soon realized that many of these men were making the same mistakes that he was making. It just took seeing another man's mistake to realize it.

One of the most common mistakes he sees men making online is not using a subject line in the email. This is a waste of time for both parties. It will also most likely be deleted rather than read, because many women are already receiving more than enough spam.

Another common mistake includes using overly used-pickup lines in the subject line of the email. Most female Internet users are too savvy to fall for these common pickup lines and will regard them as spam. Men need to learn to construct subject lines, which create attraction, making women want to read them immediately.

Other less obvious mistakes men make online include only creating one profile on one social network. This limits a man's chances of meeting a variety of women online. There are ways to save time while using the same or different profiles on multiple dating and social network sites.

While there are approximately eight mistakes a man makes online, the most annoying mistake is not using spell-check. While it is obvious why a man should use spell-check, most men do not.

These mistakes and others are all covered in the 8-week mentoring program, which may be purchased and downloaded on the web site. This 8-week program will take men through 8 weeks of practical application, mindset and belief changes, and drills all while teaching them how to write compelling subject lines, persuasive emails, and interesting online profiles.

Even though Mr. Miedema does offer one-on-one coaching and mentoring, he developed this 8-week program as an alternative to an e-book. As Mr. Miedema states:

"By explaining everything in a step-by-step, start-to-finish manner that spreads all the goodies across 8 weeks, you can go all-out and in-depth with every training, drop the biggest anchor you can find, firmly hook that puppy into your unconscious mind have fun and play around with it a bit."
